The main activities of the innovation scout are:

- search for opportunities and support for the application of scientific results of faculty members in practice;
- support for academics and PhDs. students to create and implement projects of a transfer nature;
- collecting and managing the data needed to successfully implement innovations;
- establishing and maintaining partnerships between the for-profit sector and faculty;
- creating sponsored research programs.

Contact an innovation scout with a project or idea at any stage. Whether it is an emerging project, an existing one, in need of visibility or expansion, but also a project in the form of an (however serious or crazy) idea. Scout is there to help shape ideas and possibilities into realistic goals and steps and continue to help with implementation.
